Comments for Public Posting: Seems like zoning is changing and/or upgrading in every area of Los Angeles but the Sun Valley and adjacent areas where residents are victims of incompatible and outdated zoning and land use. Why is every other area benefit from this zoning upgrades but these changes and developments never reach Sun Valley boundaries? Our community is in an environmental justice area where it is critical to make changes such as zoning and land use to mitigate and reduce air pollution. In fact, most recycling, waste management, and toxic industrial enterprises in Sun Valley are a direct result of incompatible zoning and land use. When is the city going to take us seriously and finally start implementing the 1999 Sun Valley-La Tuna Canyon Community Plan with integrated environmental justice element?
