Comments for Public Posting: Cars in LA often abuse “bus only” lanes, and it is difficult to enforce the rules. Cameras on the front of buses are the best way to do so. We need to encourage people to use public transportation instead of driving, and bus only lanes make the bus a faster and more appealing option -- unless cars block the lanes.

Comments for Public Posting: As a frequent driver and only occasional bus rider, I strongly support camera enforcement of cars abusing bus only lanes. As a driver, I respect bus only lanes because I believe in the importance of public transit, and it's infuriating when other drivers don't because they know there are no consequences. Additionally, one of the reasons I drive to work is that the buses that drive that route are slower than traffic because they are constantly blocked by cars driving or parked in the bus lane. If enforcement increases the speed of taking the bus, I would convert to being a regular bus rider.
