Comments for Public Posting: With the death of two children making headlines, a three year old on her mothers bike and another toddler in the crosswalk in Chicago, I hope this issue has your attention. The city has made grand and ambitious promises to a timeline for implementing vision zero and has failed to make any progress -- in fact, deaths in the City of Los Angeles have INCREASED -- since the announcement of vision zero. As a Californian concerned about climate change I put in the extra effort to schedule the time to bike and walk whenever possible and it's terrifying and getting worse to make these choices. I worry even more about my neighbors who can't afford the choice to bike and walk and are dependent on this modes. Please coordinate with Metro's equity team and give us more shade for bus stops!! Help make it easy and safe to make the choice to walk or bike -- implement the mobility plan NOW. Also screw your dashboards, just stop killing us. That's the only number that matters, ZERO.
