Comments for Public Posting: the marilyn monroe house does not appear to be architecturally significant. she was a notable actress of the mid-20th century. Los Angeles has a lot of houses which were once owned or occupied by Hollywood personalities. that is not a reason to infringe on ownership rights by conferring landmark status.

Comments for Public Posting: I live in England but I love Los Angeles. Please don't neglect your heritage. Hollywood's Golden Age continues to inspire and enthrall many around the world. Marilyn is now a historical, almost mythic character as important in her own way as Anne Boleyn or Cleopatra. The ever-diminishing traces of old LA need preserving. Please don't allow it to be demolished.
