Comments for Public Posting: My family moved to Los Angeles (literally to this neighborhood) in 1965. It was very exciting to be in the midst of Hollywood. Hollywood is the birthplace of the industry. The origins of film and television are here and must remain here in Los Angeles. After a lot of soul-searching about the developments coming to TVC, it became apparent that we absolutely need updated facilities, new studios, and lots of opportunity for Angelenos to continue to work in the heart of the industry here in Los Angeles. I know that people are complaining about what will happen with traffic, as it's already dense. I think people forget that CBS Television City has already been in existence for decades, with employees coming and going all day long and at peak hours. I have never felt the effects of traffic from this location as being excessive. I understand that Hackman Capital Partners is building a "Transportation Hub", which will feature a number of strategies to help mitigate traffic and congestion. I hope that in addition to this that Hackman and studio leaders that will become part of TVC, will strongly continue to advocate for affordable housing in the neighborhood and, in general, will support an enhanced and robust public transportation system. This is essential for this city, and for the times we live in, so that we can also address climate change and traffic congestion. I am fully committed to seeing TVC continue, with greatly needed renovations, upgrades, a transportation hub, and the provision of many new jobs essential to our entertainment industry. Growth will happen in this area no matter what, but with TVC and quite a few highly responsible partners, this project is being driven in a positive, plan-full and sustainable manner. My husband and I are excited about this project and we fully support the renovation and rebuilding of this historic landmark. Thank you for helping bring this project to fruition.
