Comments for Public Posting: I write in memory of P-22 mountain lion and with respect to the indigenous watershed, air, land known as Tovaangar. Enhancing the first and last mile connectivity for Angelenos traveling to and from Metro stations is pivotal in reducing Vehicle Miles Traveled (VMTs), a key metric in our pursuit of a more sustainable future. As you are well aware, our city is committed to ambitious Green New Deal goals, and I believe that prioritizing active transportation modes can play a vital role in achieving these objectives. This not only aligns with our environmental objectives but also addresses the broader nexus of SPATIAL JUSTICE. Rather than relying on financial contributions to Metro and expecting them to do something, I urge our city to take a proactive approach by investing in the construction of bike-pedestrian-sponge city infrastructure which demonstrates our commitment to a greener and resilient Los Angeles.
