Comments for Public Posting: It has been a pet peeve of mine when cars use bus lanes like there is no consequence; like they don't care about transit and are self-entitled. The road is for ALL of us (including cyclists, but I digress for now). If we allow this, it messes up transit for all, making the car more appealing, when we need less driving, especially if we want to fight climate change (electric cars are NOT the answer). With that said, we need real consequences for people who illegally use these lanes; we need enforcement for these bus lanes. When drivers learn that it is not safe to drive there, buses will flow freely, making public transit a more viable option, spurring the growth of car Independence. Please help us all.
