Comments for Public Posting: This Right to Counsel is so misguided. Another way to decimate the affordable housing segment of our once great City. Here is a more logical suggestion, why not use the funds that would have been appropriated for Right to Counsel to instead just create emergency vouchers to draw upon on? That way nobody gets evicted, the housing-provider is made whole, and everybody is happy? This policy is misguided as only lawyers, for both tenants and providers, win at the end at the cost of misappropriated tax-payer money that is better used elsewhere. Nobody is in the business to evict, but is necessary to resolve untenable issues as it is the singular tool that the City and judicial process allows us. Please do not wreck our great City even more. This is bad policy.
