Comments for Public Posting: Dear city of LA. I am a teacher and a mother. I spend half a year teaching outside of Los Angeles. I depend on the extended home sharing permit to be able to rent my home and afford to pay the mortgage while I am away. I also feel strongly that the city should not decide what I can or cannot do with my primary residence. Please consider the impact it could have on many of us if we were unable to rent our homes. Kind regards Victoria

Comments for Public Posting: Hi, My wife and I bought our first home 3 years ago. I lost my job 2 years ago and still have not found a new job. To make ends meet, we started to Airbnb part of our home. Airbnb has been a life saver for our family & local businesses because it: - creates income to help pay our mortgage and expenses - keeps me gainfully employed (running our Airbnb) - helps local businesses since Airbnb guests spend money in coffee shops, restaurants, and retail stores. We are eternally grateful for LA County's extended homesharing permit which allows us to open part of our home to LA residents (looking for a staycation or when they've been displaced from their home temporarily) and out of town guests throughout the year. Without it we would not be able to afford our home and will be forced to sell. Sincerely request you to please keep the extended homesharing permit. It helps us, local businesses and LA residents too. Thanks, Shash
