Comments for Public Posting: Los Angeles' cultural, linguistic, artistic, and economic vibrancy is largely thanks to its vast community of immigrants. At the very least, LA city officials owe these communities the most basic protections against harassment and deportation by federal immigration authorities. The Sanctuary City Ordinance is the first step toward assuring immigrant residents that they belong here and will be protected here. Let's send the message that LA will not stand for discrimination, harassment, and family separation. LA is better than that. Stop sharing city data and resources with entities that seek to tear our communities apart. Let LA lead the way, setting an example for other jurisdictions considering similar protections. Thank you to our city leaders Nithya Raman, Hugo Soto-Martinez, Eunisses Hernandez, Karen Bass, and others, who have pushed this important change. Let's make it happen!
