Comments for Public Posting: I was dismayed to see that my small neighborhood park, Slope Park, is possibly going to be developed. Los Angeles has a park shortage. It ranks 74th out of 100 of the US largest cities in terms of park access. And public parks are essential for people's health, sense of community, just having a place to be without spending money, as well as socializing, and just getting a little bit of greenery in one's daily life. Although more affordable housing is GREATLY NEEDED in Los Angeles, we also need to be increasing our public space and public parks for the health and wellbeing of Los Angeles's residents. We desperately need more parks that are an easy walk from our homes. And currently Slope Park is the ONLY park an easy walk from my home. I hope you will not give it over to developers and instead maintain it as a much needed public space. Thank you.
