Dear LA City Council,

I am writing as a member of the Los Angeles community. On many occasions I have attended City Council meetings to share my thoughts during public comment. However, recently I've noticed a disturbing trend of an uptick in hate speech and intimidation tactics by community members who are disrupting the sessions and the ability to govern.

I urge the Councilmembers to take action to make changes to make clear guidelines that restrict these types of threatening tactics to be allowed in a public space. We deserve to feel safe and so do the Councilmembers.

All the best,

Celia Ward-Wallace
