The implication that diversity, equity, and inclusion training is needed is without evidence. Whatever lack of diversity exists is due to the fact that enough diverse people don't run for open seats and – in many cases – don't step up to do the work on committees. To correct the situation, all that need happen is for more diverse people to run and to volunteer for committee work. More training is a feel-good measure that will do nothing to improve address the issue.
