Comments for Public Posting: This building ("The Chili Bowl") should absolutely be preserved. I'm a NYC transplant, and I've seen how iconic neighborhoods can be destroyed in the name of "progress" and more, more, more development. Renters are leaving Los Angeles in droves, so there's no urgent need for adding to the huge apartment complexes that are getting built all over town. Please do not let historic buildings like this one be torn down. I made a special trip out to see it, and when the pandemic is over (hopefully soon), I intend to bring friends out to look at it and even purchase some sushi from the current business on the property.
