Comments for Public Posting: Written comment: As a Taxpayer/homeowner, I agree with all efforts to take and keep (unhoused) people off our streets and sidewalks and property. Respectfully, anyone who advocates that it is okay or unconstitutional to not allow them to live on the streets, have their heads up their asses. It is a fact that the majority of the street people are druggies. When they are offered help they refuse it because they want no rules placed on them Those who advocate for them should offer them a place to live in their homes, and let them camp on their property. It's never okay for them to live on the streets and sidewalks and trash up our cities and neighborhoods. All that follows them is filth, Graffiti vandalism on our alley walls, piles of trash they leave everywhere they go, empty beer bottles in beer cases strewn all over. NO way should this be allowed. IF you want to do something offer them counseling, schooling and an incentive for housing if they do those things. But, by no means just give them things that only enables them to continue to do the same thing. Teach them to help themselves and stop depending on the state and taxpayers to take care of them. Most people know the joy of self sufficiency. Most of them are ones who were kicked out of their parents homes because they did not want to listen to and follow rules set forth. They choose to live on our streets and rob the neighborhoods to support their self inflicted bad choices to fry their brains. WELL, the rest of us do not want nor should we have to live or suffer with the results of THEIR bad choices. Please get them off our streets, out of our parks and alleys, sidewalks and out of our neighborhoods to vandalize, rob from, and trash them up. We need to feel safe to walk ,jog, or take our children to the park and not worry about needles in the sand piles and grass or being attacked, I'm one fed up person who goes out and cleans up my community from the filth they constantly leave behind. Thank you for your time, Judith Giglio
