Comments for Public Posting: Please save the Chili Bowl!!!! It's a very distinctive part of the LA cultural landscape. Protecting it is important because everyone thinks that here in LA we just bulldoze things. We can stop doing that at any time and this is a great place to start.

Comments for Public Posting: I grew up a few blocks away from this building, and have very fond memories of going to Mr. Cecil's (the restaurant occupying the space at that time) with my dad. I loved the quirky building, though I never realized it was supposed to be a chili bowl. However, the charm of this building is not so great nor so unique that it should be preserved for eternity. Cities change. New quirky buildings will get built, if we allow it. We're in a statewide housing crisis, and putting multifamily housing on this lot would let families live there instead of commuting for hours. Isn't it more important to provide homes for families, than to preserve a rather tired and ultimately unremarkable chili bowl?

Comments for Public Posting: Please preserve our city's unique architecture and history. Historic buildings like The Chili Bowl are what comprise our rich legacy and character, and this is the only one remaining of its kind. It tells many stories of Los Angeles' past. Replacing all of LA's uniqueness with similar apartment complexes is completely erasing our history and identity. Although housing is much needed all over in the city and particularly in this area, I strongly believe this can be a win-win situation with the building being included in the project, or moved. I truly hope you do the right thing and save this landmark so that future generations can know and enjoy our storied history.

Comments for Public Posting: I am VERY glad you are re-voting on the Chili Bowl Historic-Cultural Monument nomination. I absolutely support it becoming a landmark. So much of the valuable history pf Los Angeles is becoming lost because the businesses and iconic buildings are disappearing. We cannot let this happen! Thank you very much.
