Comments for Public Posting: Hello, Los Angeles is a biodiversity hot spot, which is invaluable, especially now as biodiversity declines at an alarming rate and the planet suffers. Griffith Park is a beautiful native woodland habitat and makes Los Angeles what it is. The loss of this habitat due to the expansion of the LA Zoo will be felt in the ecosystem and by the people of Los Angeles alike. I urge you to consider the biosphere and how it is connected with human society. I deeply oppose the expansion of the Los Angeles Zoo that would result in the loss of over 20 acres of native woodland habitat, all to turn the zoo into a theme park for visitors during the 2028 Olympics.
Sincerely, Devi Singh
