Comments for Public Posting: Please do this. PLEASE! Los Angeles is so behind in the movement towards livable streets and walkable communities, and it's just depressing as someone who just moved here. This beautiful, sunny city has so much more potential, and decisions like these help move it towards being an even better place to live. One of the most common complaints people have about LA is that 1) it's car-centric and 2) it's hard to build community (because of how car-centric it is). PLEASE, and make sure the bike lanes are actually protected for as far and long as possible, so people can actually use them.
