Dear City Clerk Wolcott,

It is time for the local eviction moratorium and rent freeze to end.

I urge you to end these emergency measures now. The pandemic crisis should not be used to rush through permanent regulations that are counterproductive to shared goals of making housing more affordable and available in the City.

As a housing provider, I do not understand why a rent freeze remains on properties when the economy is fully reopened, employment is robust, and operational costs skyrocket. Inflation is also having a huge impact. The cost of maintenance and repairs have drastically increased and we have some tenants not paying rent at all.

This is not sustainable. The freeze should not continue. Housing providers need financial flexibility to operate.

State and federal action put in place permanent protections for those effected by the pandemic and disbursed billions of dollars in rental assistance. The local moratorium was specifically intended as a temporary measure in response to the onset of the pandemic. It is critical that the city allow regular rental operations to resume. The justification for the temporary actions in 2020 no longer reflects today's reality.

The moratorium and rent freeze must end now. I know owners who have sold their properties due to these measures. These continued actions are bad for our communities and will make housing more expensive and harder to find. I help house Los Angeles and desperately need help.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Dear City Clerk Wolcott,

It is past time to end these policies that are destroying Los Angeles housing providers. We all know this is no longer about covid. Small housing providers have lost trust in LA City government and are making plans to exit this market. They no longer want to provide housing in this city because they cannot afford the policies you have forced on them. They will be replaced by a wave of well capitalized investors who only care about the bottom line.

Costs of operating and maintaining rental housing have skyrocketed. Interest rates are adjusting up and some landlords can no longer afford to maintain their properties.

Your policies have brought this on. End this now.

Sincerely,

I urge you to end these emergency measures now. The pandemic crisis should not be used to rush through permanent regulations that are counterproductive to shared goals of making housing more affordable and available in the City.

As a housing provider, I do not understand why a rent freeze remains on properties when the economy is fully reopened, employment is robust, and operational costs skyrocket. The freeze should not continue. Housing providers need financial flexibility to operate.

I see not limitations on food, gas, clothing or other essentials. Why does a small business operator like myself to pay the price of the economic challenges we ALL face?

State and federal action put in place permanent protections for those effected by the pandemic and disbursed billions of dollars in rental assistance. The local moratorium was specifically intended as a temporary measure in response to the onset of the pandemic. It is critical that the city allow regular rental operations to resume. The justification for the temporary actions in 2020 no longer reflects today's reality.

The moratorium and rent freeze must end now. I know owners who have sold their properties due to these measures. These continued actions are bad for our communities and will make housing more expensive and harder to find. I help house Los Angeles and desperately need help.

Thank you.

Dear City Clerk Wolcott,

Dear Honorable ... Martinez, Cedillo, Blumenfield, Koretz, Price, Hutt, Lee, Krekorian, Raman, Rodriguez, Dawson, Bonin, O-Farrell, Buscaino, and DeLeon.

You have unwittingly contributed to the rising rent problem and rental supply shortage even while you have frozen the rents for so long in violation of basic, constitutional protections against government seizures of private property.

How do I know you did this? It's very simple. None of my tenants want to move out anymore! Frozen rents is a good thing for them, of course! I would hang like glue to my unit too! We have been blessed with very good people and don't want to see them leave anyway. True story ... our only vacancy this calendar year has been a tragic death of our 83 year old resident.

Because nobody is moving, we have zero supply to offer the community, and hence, when scaled across the city, you have a massive supply shortage that you are only making worse by extending the freeze to the end of 2023. Think about it! Don't do it.

Your policy is unfair not only to landlords. You unfairly protect a class of people (those already comfortable in their rentals) to the detriment of another class of people (those desperately looking for rentals). You unwittingly created a supply shortage for millennials looking to rent their first units, for disadvantaged people of all stripes, and people of all ages who might be without a place (likely because they lost their job in a pandemic lock down). Thank you big government!

You are not hurting landlords all that much, because fewer empty units means less headaches hiring tradesmen, painters, flooring specialists, and counter top specialists to refurbish empty units. I wonder how these local professionals would react to knowing you are basically killing their livelihoods creating shortages like all the mis-guided lockdowns have done.

Enough is enough, please put a firm date of repeal of the rent freeze in this calendar year (2022) to restore some semblance of a free market economy.

Thank you
 Olivier Enders
