Comments for Public Posting: My wife and I have been going to the Pacific Dining Car since the 1980s. In fact, the morning after our wedding party in 1984, we took my parents and some guests there for breakfast so we could celebrate at a Los Angeles institution. And that's what the Pacific Dining Car is: a local institution with a rich history, a unique design, and outstanding food. It truly deserves designation as a Protected Landmark. Preserving our local history is of great value and importance, and we've seen far too many Los Angeles landmarks destroyed because they weren't appreciated. Please vote to preserve the Pacific Dining Car. (And my wife and I are still married, so we consider it a good luck harbinger too!) Thank you. Bob Gale, writer/producer, Back To The Future

Dear P.L.U.M. Committee Members,

My wife and I have been going to the Pacific Dining Car since the 1980s. In fact, the morning after our wedding party in 1984, we took my parents and some guests there for breakfast so we could celebrate at a Los Angeles institution.

And that's what the Pacific Dining Car is: a local institution with a rich history, a unique design, and outstanding food. It truly deserves designation as a Protected Landmark.

Please preserve this wonderful building and venue. Preserving our local history is of great value and importance, and we've seen far too many Los Angeles landmarks destroyed because they weren't appreciated. Please vote to preserve the Pacific Dining Car. (And my wife and I are still married, so we consider it a good luck harbinger too!)

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Bob Gale

Comments for Public Posting: I am in strong support the Pacific Dining cars historical designation. It not only is a place of cultural significance to the city but to my family as well. It is so much more than just "a nice place to celebrate". It has been an integral part of the fabric of our family as our children have grown up, a place to meet with friends before a show or game, or simply a place of to escape and feel like you are a part of history. Losing it would be a blow to the spirit of the city. What would be next? Phillippes?

Comments for Public Posting: i started going there since the early 70's [73,74] my uncles owned a Mexican restaurant on the corner of Witmer and WILSHIRE at that time one uncles love to go there from time to time i continued to do that back again in the late 80s until closing it was always a go to place for any type of occasion so it would be a terrible thing to see it gone for ever regards

Comments for Public Posting: To Whom It May Concern, I am writing this to request that the Pacific Dining Car to be made an Historical Landmark since, it has become a time-less place to dine at. My wife and I had the pleasure of celebrating our 38th Wedding Anniversary at and it was a very special experience and one that we will never forget. Thank you William G. Tarin

Comments for Public Posting: I'd like to strongly urge the council to designate the entire Pacific Dining Car building as a historic landmark. The PDC has been an integral part of Los Angeles for nearly a century and deserves to be protected. Not only because my family has shared countless celebrations and life events there, but because where else in the world can you get an excellent steak at 3am served on a white table cloth, just because? It's really LA's brand of magic at its finest. It would be a tragedy to lose yet another LA landmark, part of it's fabric, to another condo complex. Our city is rapidly losing the places and things that make it so special and unique. How many more do we need to lose before we have no sense of this city's storied and glamorous legacy?

Comments for Public Posting: I want to lend my support to the effort to designate Pacific Dining Car a Historic entity in Los Angeles, thus protecting it for all current and future Angelenos. Pacific Dining Car has always been my go to destination for all those visiting me since I moved to Los Angeles in 2005. It is one of the very few places left that represent the rich history of this city and the timelessly classy aesthetic of the early and mid 20th century. We need to preserve these places!
