Comments for Public Posting: The Pacific Dining Car is a valuable setting and a piece of both art and local history. As a very well maintained example of classic design, of timeless ambiance, and a window into the older heart of downtown Los Angeles, it has earned protection and a continued place in the city. L.A. is a place with some historic pillars of social gathering, and this is surely one.

Comments for Public Posting: Dear PLUM Committee: I am joining the choir of voices in support of designating the entire parcel and all existing structures at the site of the Pacific Dining Car an historic-cultural monument. Please take seriously the connection that Angelenos feel to their City's cultural history and important places of gathering and joy such as the PDC.

Comments for Public Posting: Pacific Dining Car should stay for its beauty, history, elegance and class. I frequented the establishment for occasions or whenever my guests visit town, and they all love it. I have precious memories there, and it'll break my, and I'm sure, many people's hearts to see it go. Please save the establishment.

Comments for Public Posting: I have dinned at the Pacific Dinning car since I was a small child. For over 70 years, I have always enjoyed going to this wonderful restaurant. The Brown Derby is gone, Scandi is gone, Chasens is gone. Please save The Pacific Dinning Car. It is a special part of LA dinning history, just like the handful of other wonderful LA eating establishments, like Phillipies, El Chlo, Yang Chow. Please SAVE Pacific Dinning CAR!

Comments for Public Posting: I am submitting this comment in support of inclusion of the original Pacific Dining Car, located at 1300 – 1314 West 6th Street, in the list of Historic-Cultural Monuments. The Pacific Dining Car is more than 100 years old and has been the central location where LA's history has been made. Meetings hosted at the Pacific Dining Car generated decisions that shaped the political, economic and cultural landscape of Los Angeles and quite possibly our state and country. In addition, the Pacific Dining Car has served as a landmark included in numerous movies, TV shows and commercials, therefore, the Pacific Dining Car generates income for LA through filming fees and other spending relative to filming production. Finally, every year we lose local historic landmarks and without inclusion on the list of Historic-Cultural Monuments, I am certain that someday we will lose the Pacific Dining Car as well. Please protect the Pacific Dining Car and preserve a valued jewel of LA's history.

Comments for Public Posting: I have been a 30 year customer of Pacific Dining Car DTLA location, and was truly saddened at its closing. It is a real community connector for many. I am a spiritual author and wrote my first two books over many long nights nursing a cup of coffee at PDC. I recently wrote an article (my annual "haunted" essay) on the Pacific Dining Car and have it posted on my website and various social media platforms. It received such an astonishing and powerful response from the public with comments on their own PDC stories and their hopes for historic designation and restoration of the restaurant, in addition to more than a thousand likes and clicks by the many fans of PDC. Please give Pacific Dining Car historic designation and allow her to continue her service to the downtown Los Angeles community in addition to the thousands of people who visit annually from all over the world! Here is my PDC story:
