Comments for Public Posting: Just a lucky local gal who grew up eating at all these great Los Angeles restaurants...please designate Pacific Dining Caras historical. It's is an icon, like Philippe's, The Apple Pan, Pink's Hot Dogs and even Tito's Tacos. These are the places folks come to L.A. to eat at.

Comments for Public Posting: I really hope that the city can see Pacific Dining Car as the institution that it was and designate it as a historically significant landmark. I first ate at PDC in 1992(3?) while doing the National Broadway tour of Guys & Dolls at the Shubert Theatre in Century City. We would get into the car and drive Downtown at 11:00pm to eat the amazing breakfast items. I fell in love with the Blueberry Pancakes. For many subsequent visits to LA (I live in NYC) the Pacific Dining Car was 'on the list'. A must.
