Comments for Public Posting: The City needs to do much better to coordinate between departments and bureaus that maintain and upgrade infrastructure in the public right-of-way. The recent Sombrita debacle and the permit nightmare it came about in response to is a key example of how the system isn't working (as is the difficulty coordinating Mobility Plan upgrades with street paving or the difficulty of installing bus shelters in the first place). The City could save time and money if silos were broken down and departments were either consolidated or coordination improved. Moreover, departments could stop working at cross purposes. Please support this common sense improvement to improve project delivery for Angelenos.

Comments for Public Posting: I greatly support enacting systems that streamline inter-agency coordination and cooperation to more efficiently implement our city's progressive mobility plans. It's hard to make these kind of changes, but they should be required to be enacted anytime a street is resurfaced or repaired, no excuses. It saves lives and improves our city!
